Julieta Baredes

The Trip

As a Jew, Julieta knows that life is a journey. It is important that Jews are aware of where they come from and know where they're heading. Being fourth generation Argentinian, her Jewish and Argentinian values merge. The buses carries on one side her father's family, and on the other, her mother's, and at the front, her sister and her as the youngest generation driving the bus to the future, keeping the same values and tradition as the rest of the "passengers". The ceiling depicts her synagogue in Entre Rios, that her great-grandparents attended as well. The walls are enriched by the candelabra for Shabbat candles, and the donation made by her grandmother to the JNF when she got married.
