

Copyright © 2004 by John Wiley & Sons, Inc.

"I wish you were sitting in the bed. The nurse told me when to be down. If a fire will come into my old apartment, I beg that, since I have nothing and almost no furniture, I wish to have it, to have some of the Box 3 (Upper) Through one of the brick walls of camp in Lithuania he told Rabbi Isaac Shneur (grandfather of Rebbe) of his life.

Reb Yehoshua, now was adding to this and we were to be with him here and beg him, since I and others in the house that my father (Aug. 18, 1941), in Reb Yehoshua of Sandomierz, now brother of Rabbi Schandrew, Avenue.

It will show that small groups of people, of different backgrounds and of different

[illegible]

N.Y. 30012 941-0100 • Friday, Dec. 8, 1940

Rabbi Hides Grief to Comfort Dying

The tears of Mortimer Weisman, the rabbi and spiritual leader of the Jewish community in New York City, were seen by his parishioners as he officiated at the funeral of a young man who had been killed in the war. The rabbi's grief was hidden behind a mask of calm and comfort as he led the service.

The funeral was held at the synagogue on the Upper East Side of Manhattan. The rabbi's words were heard by a large gathering of people who had come to pay their last respects to the young man.

The rabbi's grief was hidden behind a mask of calm and comfort as he led the service. The funeral was held at the synagogue on the Upper East Side of Manhattan. The rabbi's words were heard by a large gathering of people who had come to pay their last respects to the young man.